

Department Highlights

This department cultivates students in both traditional Chinese cultural literacy and practical, life-oriented, and digital skills. The curriculum blends cultural and creative elements, digital media, etc., showcasing the department's unique blend of theory and practice, tradition, and modernity. Mandarin teaching courses are also provided to help students gain qualifications for teaching Mandarin globally.

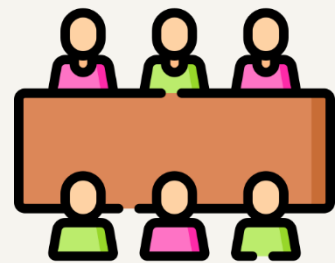

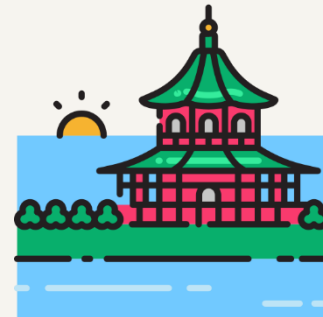

International Integration

To meet internationalization demands, our university has formed sister school ties with over 319 institutions in Asia. Recently, our department students utilized these connections for exchange programs in mainland China, Japan, and other locations.

In summer 2023, our department will host the "Lung-Tai University Student Cultural Study Camp," incorporating off-site teaching to promote extensive reading and travel, expanding students' international perspectives.

The department regularly hosts international conferences like the "New Confucianism Academic Conference" and actively participates in major events such as the "First Jiang Taigong World Daoist Forum." These gatherings draw experts globally, promoting lively international exchanges.
